* Digital SLR Magic: www.digitalslrmagic.com This well-respected online resource is loaded with information about digital photography and digital imaging in general. ## Adobe Lightroom Photographers who need a new way to organize, manage, and edit their raw images can use Adobe Lightroom to create a digital image library. Lightroom has a simple interface similar to Photoshop, so it's easy for beginners to learn how to use the program. * Adobe Lightroom: `www.adobe.com/products/lightroom` In addition to being easier to use than Photoshop, Lightroom's advantage is the ability to apply the Adobe Camera Raw (ACR) image-editing software and preset filters to your images. Plus, this app makes it easy to open images from other sources such as your camera's Compact Flash card. When using Lightroom's presets, it's important to experiment and use the tool you like most. If you enjoy cropping, for example, you may want to use Lightroom's built-in feature to crop to a preset. However, if you like when your images are automatically cropped, you need to use that preset. When using the Presets drop-down menu, you may want to choose the option, _Apply Preset to All Layers_. If you prefer to have a background and not just a solid color to work with, you can select a background color and use that one as your background. You have other options for adding text, borders, and frames. Be careful with the preset collections you choose. You can apply a preset to a number of images, but you cannot change a preset after it has been applied to other images — you must change it in the collection. Presets are great to use if you need a specific look quickly but don't have the time to work on a project. You can choose presets for a variety of options including Graduated, Vintage, and Abstract, shown in Figure 5-2. You can find other collections on the Lightroom web site at `www.lightroom.com` for more choices. Figure 5-2: This screen shows the presets for a variety of options. | --- | --- | --- To change the settings on an image, click Edit and you see additional choices including Edit in Camera Raw and Edit in Photoshop. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an ink jet recording apparatus and an ink jet recording method. 2. Description of the Related Art A field of application of ink jet recording is expanding in recent years, and color image forming apparatus using ink jet recording are also being actively developed. In an ink jet recording apparatus, recorded image quality, such as color reproducibility, water resistance, and sensitivity, is improved by using a recording medium having a high ink absorbability. In particular, for using recycled paper as a recording medium, paper recovering property is improved because of using blended paper comprising pulp fibers mixed with paper waste material, so that the image quality is improved. On the other hand, Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-313058 has disclosed an ink jet recording apparatus for, when using paper having a low ink absorbability, improving the image quality by applying to the paper a recording liquid having a reaction liquid having excellent absorption capability. Furthermore, Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-316179 has disclosed an ink jet recording apparatus in which the ink absorption amount of ink is changed so that the ink is absorbed with stability by applying to the paper an ink having a high or low drying property. As described in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-313058 and Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-316179, when using recycled paper, the recorded image quality can be improved by applying an ink having a high absorption capability to the recycled paper. In the case of using recycled paper, the ink absorption amount increases in accordance with an increase in the amount of the waste material contained in the recycled paper. Therefore, in the ink jet recording apparatus described in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-313058 and Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-316179, the amount of the ink to be applied to a recording medium is changed in accordance with the content of the waste material contained in the paper. In the case of using the conventional recycled paper, the ink may be applied after adjusting the printing for each kind of recycled paper or each kind of recording medium, in order to achieve a desired image quality. Therefore, in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2000-313058, a dedicated recording unit is provided in order to adjust the printing for each kind of recycled paper or each kind of recording medium. However, in the case of using paper having a low ink

What's New in the?

Our initial goal in this line of investigation was to search for novel pathways and cell signaling proteins involved in the production and transport of the G-CSF-receptor in AML-1 cells. We have successfully localized the G-CSFR to the plasma membrane and have found that G-CSF acts to activate and internalize the G-CSFR in a clathrin-independent fashion. As a consequence, the classic signaling pathways such as the MAPKs, the AKT and the JNK are not activated by G-CSF in AML-1 cells in contrast to other cell types, and the JAK-STAT pathway is not activated. Another novel observation was that cytochalasin B, a well-known inhibitor of actin polymerization, is a potent and specific inhibitor of G-CSF-induced JAK-STAT activation in AML-1 cells. We are continuing these studies and have isolated the G-CSFR gene from AML-1 cells and found that it is mutated at tyrosine 839. The mutation results in aberrant G-CSF signaling and altered G-CSF-induced growth and cytokine production. G-CSF plays an important role in the hematopoietic system and has been used as an effective cytokine in the treatment of various hematological disorders and solid tumors. However, despite all the therapy, mortality of cancer patients and patients suffering from hematological disorders has not been decreased significantly. Therefore, to increase the efficacy of G-CSF as a cancer therapy, we searched for an improved way of administering G-CSF with a lower dose of G-CSF and found that leukine could act as a substitute for G-CSF to upregulate the expression of G-CSFR in the surface membrane of AML-1 cells. Our new findings indicate that leukine can replace G-CSF in vivo to upregulate G-CSFR expression and to elicit potent cytokine responses. The new protocol of treating cancer patients with a combination of leukine and G-CSF is being evaluated in order to improve the efficacy of G-CSF. We have shown that AML-1 cells express the IL-6 receptor subunit gp130, and have identified the STAT3 and STAT5 tyrosine phosphorylation sites. In addition, our preliminary data indicate that G-CSF strongly activates IL-6 signaling in AML-1 cells through the gp130
