Traditional media is an old way of communicating; the digital age has changed all that. But it's easier than you think to mix traditional and digital media into your marketing strategy. Traditional marketing gives you the advantage of reaching a larger audience. Digital marketing allows you to communicate better with the audience you already have. The way we photograph is changing rapidly due to technology. Digital photography is much more accessible to the everyday person than ever before. These advances in photography technology have opened more creative options to photographers. Social media, photo sharing services, and online photography have all created waves in the market. Technology has been honing the traditional art of photography for decades, and the digitally improved technology continues this. Buildings, bridges, trains, stars, waves, family portraits, pets, animals, and the ocean are just a few of the beautiful sights in the vast world of photography. Digital cameras have also improved significantly in the past few years. This combined with smaller and faster DSLR's in the hands of everyday people has made photography more popular than ever before. A great photography teacher can open doors to the world of photography so much more than the traditional method could. Often, photographers can end up in a very confined scene to really make an image so, the ability to seemingly fit anywhere in the scene is really what makes a great photographer. Today photographers need to become trained in both newer and traditional techniques, which make up the core of the profession.
